The diagram illustrates the connection process between a printer and a computer. On the left, a white printer is shown with its back panel facing the viewer. A grey USB cable is connected to the printer's USB port, which is highlighted with a red arrow. This action is labeled with a teal circle containing the number 1. To the right, the printer is shown with its back cover removed, revealing the internal circuit board. The grey USB cable is now being inserted into the computer's USB port, also highlighted with a red arrow. This action is labeled with a teal circle containing the number 2.

The diagram illustrates the setup process for a printer. On the left, a computer tower is shown with a USB cable being inserted into its port, accompanied by a large green circle with the number '3'. To the right, a CD labeled 'hp cp1160' is shown being inserted into a printer, accompanied by a large green circle with the number '4'. The printer itself is partially visible on the far right.

A diagram illustrating a network setup. On the left, three computer monitors are shown, each connected by a line to a central point. This central point is represented by a small, light-colored rectangular device with two ports, labeled 'LIO'. To the right of this central device, the text 'Windows Mac OS 8.6, 9.X, X Classic' is displayed above 'LAN' and '+'. Below 'LAN' is another '+', followed by 'LIO'.

- For easy network setup, purchase an LIO module.
  - See LIO documentation for more information.

- Pour simplifier la configuration du réseau, procurez-vous un module LIO.
- Pour plus d'informations, reportez-vous à la documentation du module LIO.

- Acquistare un modulo LIO per una più semplice installazione di rete.
- Per ulteriori informazioni, vedere la documentazione LIO.
