Note for Microsoft® Windows® XP Home and Pro Users

During the setup process for a dial-up Internet account, a small .ins file is passed to your computer. This file contains all of your dial-up settings. If you're running Windows XP with Service Pack 2 (SP2), your computer may read the file as a potential hazard and display a series of Security Warning dialog boxes.

The first Security Warning dialog box will ask you whether you'd like to Open, Save, or Cancel. We recommend selecting the Open option. The next security warning offers Run and Don't Run options. Choose Run. This will automatically update your computer with your dial-up settings.
