

Andrzej Kawalec

Chief Technology Officer, Enterprise Security
Hewlett-Packard Company

Andrzej Kawalec is chief technology officer of Information Security at HP, a subsidiary providing security advice and outsourcing to major banks, government departments and global manufacturers. He is responsible for information assurance strategy, propositions and market-facing activity. He leads research and innovation, with a focus on cloud, consumerization, cyber security and the business risks surrounding information security systems, policies, users and process.

Prior to HP, Kawalec spent 15 years at some of the world's largest IT companies, including Siemens, Compaq and Digital. He has worked across the public and private sectors to help define and promote information strategies.

